Introduction

There are both positive and negative effects of cell phones on today's generation. In my opinion, there are good reasons why students allow cell phones to be used in schools.

Parents can communicate directly with their children in emergencies. During break time, when there is no continuous classroom, children can easily talk to their parents and get the information they need from them. Besides, if students suddenly decide to participate in an after-school program, they may be able to quickly inform their parents about the use of their cell phones.

The endless technological advances these days have made cell phone use more common. First, computers and then cell phones significantly impact people's lives. Therefore, we all need to educate our students and inform them of the benefits and benefits of using cell phones.

In my opinion, students have the right to bring their cell phones to school until the classroom is not disrupted. If they do, teachers may punish him. Sometimes, school phones do not work well and have very little value. If by the time most students need a phone, how will they be able to contact their parents? That's why I think; students must be allowed to bring cell phones to school.

There may be situations where students plan to meet alone in other areas. If so, they will not be able to contact you by phone at school. With their cell phones, they can easily communicate with others. They could even use their cell phones as a counter flashlight at school.

Mobile phones help to increase mobility and flexibility between students and their parents. Students can use a cell phone for a Caffé, a library, a toilet, and anything else if that does not affect anyone else. If students need their parents to bring them something important to the school, cell phones will help students.

Allowing mobile phones in school does not mean that students have the opportunity to use mobile phones in any way. They should not spend time playing games on mobile phones at school. As a result, the school may introduce new rules such as whether students will need to put their cell phones in front of them or hand out their cell phones to teachers. If the phone rings or students need to call someone, teachers will give them phones.

Many schools in India do not have computers. Therefore, cell phones that are very useful for students can be used to learn a few things that should be taught on a computer. If a person forgets to bring his notebook, he can quickly take notes on his mobile phone.

There are also the adverse effects of cell phones, such as private games, obscene viewing of the toilet, etc. But school authorities must take action and make new rules for these things. Parents of learners should be kept informed of everything they do at school on their mobile phones. If these things are not done, mobile phones should be allowed to be used in school by students.
